The Old Protestant Cemetery close to the Casa Garden was established by the British East India Company in 1821 in Macau - in response to a lack of burial sites for Protestants in the Roman Catholic Portuguese Colony. Macau was considered by the Portuguese to be sacred Roman Catholic ground and the authorities barred the burial of Protestants within its city walls whilst on the other side of the barrier gate the Chinese were equally as intolerant of the burial of foreigners in its soil. This left the Protestant community of British, American and Northern European traders with the only option of a secret night-time burial in the land between the city walls and the barrier gate and the risk of confrontation with Chinese should they be discovered or worse - desecration of the grave once they had gone.

The matter was finally resolved in 1821 after the death of Robert Morrison's wife Mary when the local committee of the East India Company voted to purchase a plot of land and resolve its legal status with the Portuguese such that the burial of Protestants would be permitted there. Later the East India Company allowed burial of all foreigners and several graves were moved from other locations outside the city walls into the cemetery with people being reinterred from other burial places in the Macao Hillside thus explaining why some graves are dated before the Cemetery founding in 1821.

Nationals of Britain, the United States of America, Holland, Denmark, Sweden and Germany are buried here. The cemetery was closed in 1858 after which the cemetery began to be referred to as the "Old" Protestant Cemetery.

Adjoining the cemetery is the Morrison Chapel named in honour of Robert Morrison. The cemetery is divided into two levels: the upper level and the lower level. The Upper Level has an area measuring 30 metres long by 10 metres wide with forty tombs sheltered by lush trees and a pathway. The lower level measuring 60 by 30 metres is surrounded by tall trees and has tombstones lined on both sides leaving a spacious lawn in the middle. The tombstones are made of granite in general, differing in size, in style and design. In 2005 the cemetery was officially listed as part of the UNESCO World Heritage Site Historic Centre of Macau.

The Macau Protestant Chapel also known as the Morrison Chapel in Cameos Square near the Cameo Gardens and next to the Cemetery, dates back about 200 years although the present building was built in 1922 and was dedicated by Bishop Duppuy which was reported in the Hong Kong Daily Press 9 January 1922.

“Sacred to the memory of Mr Charles Hawkins, late third officer of the H.C. ship Atlas. Aged 24 who on the night of Monday the 18th January 1830 was upset in the ships cutter near the island of Toon Koo, when Mr Middlemass, Surgeon of the H.C.S. Mangles and the whole of the boats crew unhappily perished. As a token of regard for their amicable and lamented shipmate, his Commander and Brother Officers have erected this monument and out of respect for their character as deserving seaman have caused the names of his fellow sufferers to be inscribed on his tomb
